

Malonda Richard

As an author, host, spokeswoman and model, Malonda Richard communicates with a powerful, natural ability. From 1999 – 2001, she earned her following as the host of BET: *Next and Out the Box, music programs showcasing cutting-edge alternative, hip-hop, gospel and R&B artists, including Alicia Keys, Lenny Kravitz, Jill Scott and Meshell Ndegeocello. Malonda carried this energy throughout the network, accepting projects thereafter with BET Jazz. Malonda's tenure at BET jump-started other television and event projects with CBS, Absolut, and added a number of legendary interviews, tributes, music festivals, videos, shows and commercials to her credits.

Through her many formal dialogues, Malonda has entertained topics of art, music, fashion, beauty, history and politics. In 2003, however, Malonda's conversation shifted to an entirely different concept... parenting. This precious, life-altering event left Malonda, for once, speechless. Malonda's challenges as a single mother were intense, and she spent countless hours gauging the balance of career and family. While refocusing her life's lens, Malonda was determined to create the best of both worlds.

Today, Malonda is the founder of MamiHood.com and is starring in and co-producing an original documentary, affectionately titled, Mamihood: A Reel Life Documentary. An award-winning television producer and highly skilled, NYU-trained multi-media professional, Malonda shares a compelling, first- and one-of-kind, cinematic experience. Not just a film project, Mamihood is a movement that seeks to improve the quality of life for single mothers everywhere, in an effort for them to be and 'breed' their best.
